

Good practices in combating female genital mutilation

Apžvalga

---

Description

This study identified good practices in combating female genital mutilation. The good practices found a number of approaches to help combat FGM, including the engagement of local communities; training to help health professionals treat and counsel girls and women living with FGM; and training in data collection for medical staff, social operators, police and the judiciary.

Further information

Good practices on administrative data collection on violence against women

EIGE's studies on female genital mutilation

Publications

---