

Gender Mainstreaming in Government Agencies, GMGA

The Swedish government has assigned 41 of its agencies to work actively with gender mainstreaming in 2015-2018. The aim of the GMGA programme is for the participating agencies to integrate a gender equality perspective in all aspects of their work. The programme is an initiative to help the included agencies work towards the Swedish national gender equality objective of giving women and men equal power to shape society and their own lives. Eighteen of the 41 agencies were so-called pilot agencies in 2013-2014. These agencies will now continue their gender mainstreaming efforts and the knowledge gained from their work will be shared with the 23 new agencies. The Swedish Secretariat for Gender Research has been assigned by the government to support the 41 agencies in the planning and implementation of their development work. The Secretariat will also coordinate competence-building activities, organise forums for sharing of experiences, identify and disseminate examples of good practice as well as document the results of the agencies' work. The Swedish version of includegender.org, Jämställ.nu, serves as a platform for disseminating the results and experiences from the agencies' efforts.
