

Data collection on intimate partner violence by the police and justice sectors: Cyprus

The infographic features the EIGE logo and title at the top. Below the title is a photograph of a woman in a white lab coat, possibly a police officer or justice worker, with a scale of justice in the foreground. The infographic is divided into several sections:

- Why do we need administrative data on intimate partner violence?

Many women victims of intimate partner violence in the EU Member States remain unprotected. Perpetrators often go unpunished due to inadequate law enforcement approaches, which do not align with international human rights treaties. A gender-neutral approach to the law, coupled with the unavailability of data and existing stereotypes result in the denial of violence against women and its tolerance or normalisation. States must ensure that they carry out the due diligence principle to investigate and punish acts of violence and provide compensation to victims. Improving data collection and providing comprehensive and reliable administrative data is crucial to monitor the police and justice sectors' response to violence against women. It also ensures a high degree of transparency and accountability of the high-quality administrative data in line with the international commitments of Member States to combat violence against women as defined in Directive 2011/36/EU on Victim Rights Directive and the Istanbul Convention.
- The European Institute for Gender Equality (EIGE) defines intimate partner violence as all acts of physical, sexual, psychological or economic violence that occur between former or current spouses or partners, whether or not the perpetrator shares or has shared the same residence with the victim. It constitutes a form of violence which affects women disproportionately and which is therefore distinctly gendered.
- EU definition of intimate partner violence is in line with the definition of domestic violence of the Istanbul Convention.
- 28% of women aged 18 and above have been victims of intimate partner violence by a partner or ex-partner.
- 2% of these women reported it to the police.

Source: The Institute for Gender Equality, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023

Many women victims of intimate partner violence in the EU Member States remain unprotected. Perpetrators often go unpunished due to inadequate law enforcement approaches, which do not align with international human rights treaties. A gender-neutral approach to the law, coupled with the unavailability of data and existing stereotypes result in the denial of violence against women and its tolerance or normalisation.

States must ensure that they carry out the due diligence principle to investigate and punish acts of violence and provide compensation to victims. Improving data collection and providing comprehensive and reliable administrative data is crucial to monitor the police and justice sectors' response to violence against women.

Read more

Data collection on intimate partner violence by the police and justice sectors - all EU countries

Indicators on intimate partner violence and rape for the police and justice sectors

EIGE's work on data collection on violence against women

---

Downloads

Data collection on intimate partner violence by the police and justice sectors: Cyprus

EN (PDF, 647.05 KB)

---

Metadata

COUNTRY: Cyprus

AREAS: Data collection on violence against women, Gender-based violence

AUTHOR: EIGE

ISBN: 978-92-9470-318-7

DOI: 10.2839/514067