

Grey literature on economic and financial affairs

The promotion of gender equality can help unleash the talents of women, which has been proven to contribute to sustainable economic growth.

There has been an increased focus on gender equality in economic and fiscal policies over the past decade, in particular in taxation, social security and labour market regulation.
