

Coercive control and psychological violence against women

Overview

Description

EIGE prepared a report at the request of the French Presidency of the Council of the European Union. The report examines evidence on coercive control and psychological violence against women in the EU Member States. The report analyses the causes and consequences of coercive control and psychological violence, assess how they are criminalised, and examines the different ways countries try to tackle these phenomena.

The results were published in 2022.
