Gender Equality Index 2017

Conference / 11 October 2017, Brussels

Explore Gender Equality Index 2017 online

The conference will provide a forum for around 300 decision-makers and practitioners to discuss the findings of the Gender Equality Index. We will look at recent trends and seek solutions to gender inequalities in the current political and economic context.

Its satellite domain of intersecting inequalities reveals some of the vast inequalities within a few selected groups of women and men based on age, disability, family status, country of birth and education. This third edition also provides new data for social power and health behaviour, not measured in previous editions due to a lack of suitable indicators.

Vanessa Moore
Senior Researcher, European Institute of Women's Health

Vanessa Moore is a Senior Researcher at the European Institute of Women's Health. Vanessa is working with the EIWH to make gender equity in public health, biomedical research, treatment, care and social policies a priority for EU action. The EIWH considers that many factors that influence health lie outside the health sector, and a gender/social aspect is always included in their work. The EIWH's work takes a life-course approach to health and well-being, and believe that action must be taken early and at critical points to ensure health and well-being from young through to older age.

Vanessa has led the EIWH's work in the area of gender and vaccination access and uptake across the lifespan as well as chronic diseases, older people and public health. She is involved in the EIWH's policy briefs on topics including diabetes, CVD, lung cancer, and the impact of smoking and alcohol on women. As part of her work, Vanessa has highlighted sex and gender issues at the European Medicines Agency.

Vanessa is currently a Board Member of the European Public Health Alliance (EPHA).

She is also in the process of completing her PhD at the School of Social Work and Social Policy at Trinity College Dublin, where she is analysing the experiences of persons with young onset dementia of accessing health care services and social care services in Ireland.
