Aims and objectives

Each annual report covers following issues: population, health, education, employment and salaries, social welfare, health and pension insurance, judiciary, political power. The objective of the consequent issuing of the publication is not only to raise awareness of the inequalities, but also to uncover which areas need most attention. This statistics helps us to see that despite the National Policy, women are still largely underrepresented in most areas.

Results and impact

The results of issuing this statistics are hardly measurable, even though they have been published since 2006. However, it is obvious that the issuing of these data are important for uncovering gender inequalities across sectors.
