
Položaj trudnica i majki s malom djecom na tržištu rada

The results of the research about pregnant women`s access to the labour market, as well as of access to the labour market of women of small children are presented. Results indicate how gender based discrimination of pregnant workers is quite widespread at Croatian labour market, and it is often related to the gendered division of childcare in the family. Data shown how employers often do not comply with existing legislative arrangements related to protection of pregnant workers and worker with small children.
