

The political preferences and value orientations of Irish journalists

The article explores how class position, political orientation, and social values assist in generating meaning making among Irish journalists. Study finds that the profession is largely young and male - women entail only about a third of all professionals. However, the author reasons that over time the overall number of female journalists are likely to increase, but higher positions will remain male dominated

Bibliographic Citation:

Corcoran, M. P. (2004). The political preferences and value orientations of Irish journalists. Irish Journal of Sociology, 13 (2), pp 22-42.

Format: pdf

Weblinks

PDF

Metadata

TYPE: Publication

CREATOR/AUTHOR: Corcoran, Mary P.

PUBLISHER: Irish Journal of Sociology

RIGHTS: Irish Journal of Sociology

LANGUAGE: English

COVERAGE: Ireland

KEYWORDS: journalism, media professionals, participation of women