

The glass ceiling in the cultural sector

Before this study came into play, there was no data on the position of women in the cultural sector. To better understand whether there is a glass ceiling in the sector, the study looked at the position of women in the cultural sector as a whole and sub-sectors separately, including the media. There where differences were found, barriers were explored.

Key information on trends and challenges on women and the media:

The study provides quantitative data on the position of women in all sectors of culture and thereby also media.

Key stakeholders mentioned:
