

National Human Development Report: Romania 1999

The 1999 NHDR focused on the effects of the transition process in the different dimensions of human development in Romania. The report pointed to overall negative economic trends, a deficit in resources allocated for human development, a decline of the internal production and the growth of disparities and poverty. It also recommended a set of human development policies that could address the challenges in a more proactive and systemic manner. The report concluded that, despite some progress in macro-economic activities and indicators, sustained improvements in human development were still a challenge for Romanian policy makers.

---

Metadata

TYPE: Publication

CREATOR/AUTHOR: Romanian Academy & UNDP (United Nations Development Programme Romania)

PUBLISHER: Bucharest: Expert

LANGUAGE: Romanian, English

COVERAGE: Romania

SECTOR: Employment

FORMAT: Other - text

KEYWORDS: reconciliation of work and family, gender equality, gender relations, gender roles, family inactivity rate, unemployment