
Strengthening Women's Voices in Government: A response to the public consultation

This document outlines the response to the findings of the Government Equalities Office's consultation on proposals to develop new methods of engaging with women in order to ensure effective dialogue on key issues of concern to women of all ages and backgrounds (the largest "listening to women" consultation in a decade). The text elaborates on the government's new engagement strategy which will draw on these consultation findings, taking into account suggestions and concerns where practicable, particularly those raised about the use of a government or third party IT Platform.
