

Activity of Associazione Padri Separati (Association of Separated Fathers)

Aims and objectives

Founded in 1991, the Association aims to respond to the cultural shift that has seen men increasingly interested in parenting, not only by providing economic and material support, but also by participating willingly in the affective and emotional growth of their children. The Association offers specific services based on personal circumstances and needs.

Contents/activities/services

Activities

- Interventions are intended to provide legal support to inform parents about everything they will face during the legal process, during which they will be accompanied, if requested, by legal experts in family law. The Association has the support of a network of professional lawyers throughout the country.

- The Association also provides assistance and professional support to those who may be facing the psychological consequences of separation, and in cases where agencies such as Social Services and the Juvenile Courts are involved.
 - "New Fatherhood" magazine deals with various topics: stories of fathers who have particularly significant experience, updates for parents on the legal situation in Italy, insights on topics important to those who care about the value of family and more. It helps to raise awareness, bringing forward issues around separated fathers and highlighting the problems of a legal system that disadvantages them.
