

Data collection on intimate partner violence by the police and justice sectors: Malta

Data collection on intimate partner violence by the police and justice sectors
Malta

Why do we need administrative data on intimate partner violence?

Many women victims of intimate partner violence in the EU Member States remain unprotected. Perpetrators often go unpunished due to inadequate law enforcement approaches, which do not align with international human rights treaties. A gender-neutral approach to the law, coupled with the unavailability of data and existing stereotypes result in the denial of violence against women and its tolerance or normalisation.¹⁾ States must ensure that they carry out the due diligence principle to investigate and punish acts of violence and provide compensation to victims. Improving data collection and providing comprehensive and reliable administrative data is crucial to monitor the police and justice sectors' response to violence against women. High-quality administrative data in line with the international commitments of Member States to prevent violence against women is defined in Directive 2012/29/EU (The Victims Rights Directive) and the Istanbul Convention.

The European Institute for Gender Equality (EIGE) defines intimate partner violence as all acts of physical, sexual, psychological or economic violence that occur between former or current spouses or partners, whether or not the perpetrator shares or has shared the same residence with the victim. It constitutes a form of violence which affects women disproportionately and which is therefore distinctly gendered.

IGEV definition of intimate partner violence is in line with the definition of domestic violence of the Istanbul Convention.

In 2018, 7.7% of women based their victims of intimate partner violence to their children.

Only 1.4% of those women contacted the police.

1) EIGE, 2018. International Convention for the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (CERD), 1965. <https://www.unhcr.org/refugees/article/43c47623>

Many women victims of intimate partner violence in the EU Member States remain unprotected. Perpetrators often go unpunished due to inadequate law enforcement approaches, which do not align with international human rights treaties. A gender-neutral approach to the law, coupled with the unavailability of data and existing stereotypes result in the denial of violence against women and its tolerance or normalisation.

States must ensure that they carry out the due diligence principle to investigate and punish acts of violence and provide compensation to victims. Improving data collection and providing comprehensive and reliable administrative data is crucial to monitor the police and justice sectors' response to violence against women.

Read more

Data collection on intimate partner violence by the police and justice sectors - all EU countries

Indicators on intimate partner violence and rape for the police and justice sectors

EIGE's work on data collection on violence against women

Downloads

Data collection on intimate partner violence by the police and justice sectors: Malta

EN (PDF, 639.18 KB)

Metadata

COUNTRY: Malta

AREAS: Data collection on violence against women, Gender-based violence

AUTHOR: EIGE

ISBN: 978-92-9470-334-7

DOI: 10.2839/38128