

Gender Equality Index 2017: Violence against women - the most brutal manifestation of gender inequality

Gender Equality Index 2017
Violence against women: the most brutal manifestation of gender inequality

Violence and gender equality

Eradicating gender-based violence against women is a priority of the European Union (EU) and its Member States. This commitment is affirmed in the main EU gender equality policy documents, most recently by the EU signing the leading regional legal instrument on gender-based violence: the Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (Istanbul Convention). EU signatories of the convention will integrate complementary to both social and EU levels for an integrated approach to combating violence against women.

Gender inequalities are both the cause and enabling context of violence against women. Eliminating it is a profound, but also evolving, political challenge that requires addressing the unequal social, political and economic power held by women and men.

Over the past decade, progress towards gender equality in the EU has been rapid. Since 2010, the average Gender Equality Index score of 76.2 out of 100 in 2015, the EU has signed more international treaties (Figure 5). In nearly all Member States, the number of women in parliament has a better balance of women and men in decision-making.

Violence against women is included in the Gender Equality Index as a specific domain. It means that the score for violence does not impact the final score of the Gender Equality Index. However, this indicator dimension seems to be correlated with other domains, in particular against women's rights to equality in the field of work, health, housing, power, and political participation. Reducing it weakens and erodes women's experiences of violence. Unlike other domains, the overall objective is not to reduce the gap of violence between women and men but to reduce the violence itself.

↑ Domain score (EU 28) ↓ Domain score (EU 28)

© European Institute for Gender Equality (EIGE). Gender Equality Index – Report. Published by EIGE at the request of the European Commission. Working website at <http://www.eige.europa.eu/gender-equality-index>. 2016. Reprinted.

Explore the Gender Equality Index at www.eige.europa.eu/gender-equality-index

Eradicating gender-based violence against women is a priority of the European Union (EU) and its Member States. This commitment is affirmed in the main EU gender equality policy documents, most recently by the EU signing the leading regional legal instrument on gender-based violence: the Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (Istanbul Convention).

Gender inequalities are both the cause and enabling context of violence against women. Eliminating it is a profound, but also evolving, political challenge that requires addressing the unequal social, political and economic power held by women and men.

Over the past decade, progress towards gender equality in the EU has been rather slow. With an average Gender Equality Index score of 66.2 out of 100 in 2015, the EU has large room for improvement. In nearly all Member States, the notable driver of progress has been a better balance of women and men in decision-making.

Violence against women is included in the Gender Equality Index as a satellite domain. It means that the score for violence does not impact the final score of the Gender Equality Index. However, the violence dimension needs to be considered alongside other domains, as violence against women reflects persisting inequalities in the fields of work, health, money, power, education and time use.

Further information

Report: Gender Equality Index 2017 - Measurement framework of violence against women

Press release: Gender Equality Index 2017 - We cannot be silent about violence

Data on violence against women in the Gender Equality Index 2017

All data in the Gender Equality Index 2017

Downloads

Gender Equality Index 2017: Violence against women - the most brutal manifestation of gender inequality

EN (PDF, 378.72 KB)

Metadata

AREAS: Gender Equality Index

AUTHOR: EIGE

ISBN: 978-92-9470-288-3

DOI: 10.2839/09957