

Grey literature on health

The screenshot shows a webpage with an orange header containing the EIGE logo and the title 'Grey literature on health'. Below the header, there is a section titled 'What is grey literature?' followed by a paragraph explaining its definition. To the right, another paragraph states that EIGE has collected grey literature on gender equality and provides a search interface. A central image shows a heart-shaped bowl of fruit with a stethoscope. Below this is a section titled 'The relevance of gender in health' with a paragraph about health policy. Further down, there are sections for 'Grey literature in EIGE's library', 'Gender differences in health', and 'change, gender and health'. A 'Reading list' box at the bottom right lists several documents.

Health policy needs to adequately explore and address the combination of social and biological sources of differences in women's and men's health. An understanding of the interaction between sex and gender in the development and management of health can be beneficial in terms of prevention, intervention and outcome.
