Data talks on number of women in positions in the largest listed companies published

How many women have top positions in the EU candidate countries and potential candidates?

EIGE's Gender Statistics Database has expanded beyond the current EU Member States. We can now monitor how gender-balance in decision-making is developing also in the Western Balkan countries and Turkey, which are part of the EU programme called the Instrument for Pre-accession Assistance (IPA). EIGE supports the IPA beneficiaries in their efforts to monitor and foster gender equality in the region. This is what the data shows:

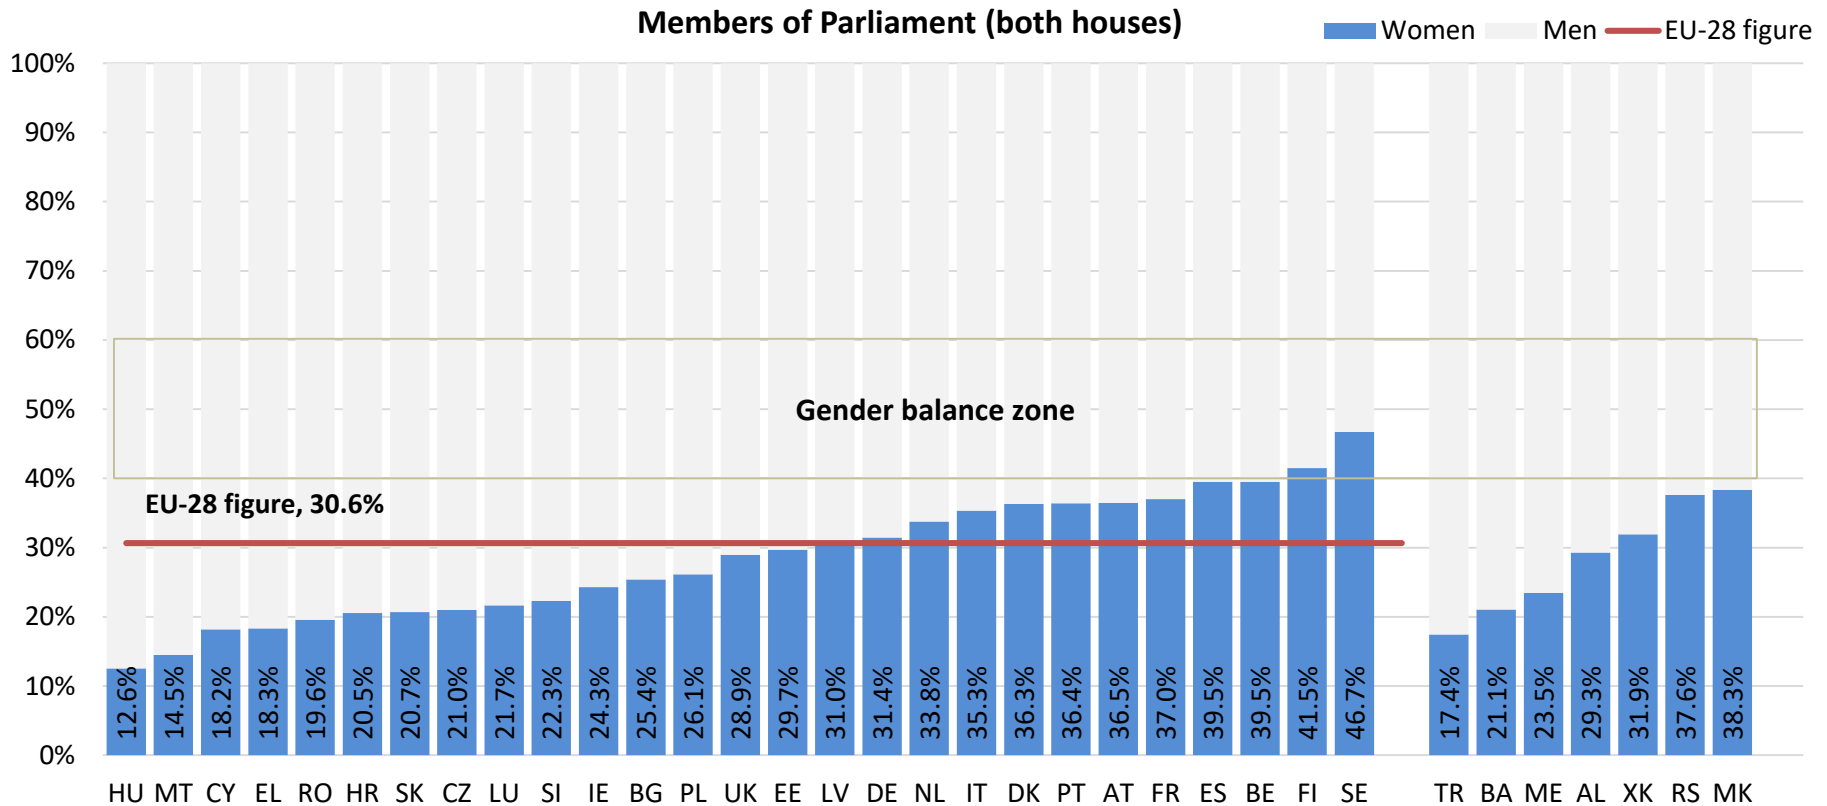

- In May 2019, national governments across the 28 EU Member States had 30 % women members (senior ministers) compared to 20 % women in the governments of IPA beneficiaries. With 53 % women, the government of Albania achieved gender-balance, but other IPA beneficiaries are far behind. Serbia and Bosnia and Herzegovina had more than 20 % women in the cabinet but the 24-member cabinet in Kosovo included only two women ministers (8 %).
- The difference is narrower in national parliaments: 32 % in the EU compared to 26 % in IPA beneficiaries. Parliaments in North Macedonia (38 % women) and Serbia (37 % women) are close to gender-balance, but in all other cases women account for less than a third of members, notably only 17 % in Turkey.
- In April 2019, the share of women amongst board members of the largest listed companies was 28 % for the EU Member States and 17 % among IPA beneficiaries.
