Gender, digitalisation and the future of work

Reference number: EIGE/2019/OPER/07

Description of the contract

The European Institute for Gender Equality (EIGE) envisages awarding a low-value contract with a professional service provider in order to carry out a study to review data and information on how digitalization affects the world of work from a gender perspective in the EU Member States and to link it with EIGE's Gender Equality Index.

Description of the requested services

The Gender Equality Index 2020 will analyse links between gender equality and digitalisation. The specific objectives of the contract are 1) to provide EIGE with supporting background documents on the conceptual links between the Gender Equality Index and its thematic focus on digitalisation (based on research and policy review); 2) to propose a set of indicators, based on EU wide comparable data, to measure the effects of digitalisation on work, earnings and knowledge from a gender and intersectional perspective; 3) to link statistically the proposed set of indicators with the Gender Equality Index; and 4) to identify knowledge gaps in the area of gender-related opportunities and risks of digitalization in the analyzed domains.
